Chapter 1 by Alice Marie Bride

My name, is unknown.

My origin, is unknown.

My purpose- or so I was told- was to lead us to a better place. That place was unknown, and our fate was unknown. Whether I was born or created is still a mystery, or whether or not I was a human was unknown. I could seem to process the data around me and analyze things and substances, an ability I thought everyone had. I could see shimmering colours in the air where people- or any living thing- had been. They weren't tangible colours- they were motion colours. This I knew none other had, for if I spoke of it they looked at me dumbfounded.

I am devoid of all "feeling" or "emotions," yet I understand what they are. Joy, sadness, anger, anxiety, love.. I can spot and recognize them all, but I felt none. There were whispers among the villagers that I was an old droid from a far away place, sent here with our old planet's first explorer. The murmurs of the Old Planet sent any young child into wild fits of fantasy. The Old Planet was said to be one similar to this one, yet different. The talk of the Old Planet had to be kept quiet- or else the royal guard might hear. The guards were what they called "Lazy, fat, good for nothing barbarians who only cared for themselves."

transcribed that there are said to be 11 dimensions and they can all be transported through all 11. This process (or what we could make out) would have been called the String Theory. In ancient texts, a man named Albert Einstein had written about how he had discovered a new kind of energy- the energy that made up space- Dark Energy. Most of the text's meaning has been lost over time.

I was the one who would try and save us.

But how?
